

Mrs Nosisi Madlanga

Acting Deputy Director-General: Media and Content

Mrs Nosisi Madlanga, née Nkenkana is a soft-spoken analytical professional and highly experienced leader with broad experience in multiple disciplines. She cut her teeth in the academia as a university lecturer where she taught Statistics and Applied Statistics - empowering students and practitioners on essential concepts and techniques of statistics most useful in various socio-economic disciplines. Her initial stint in the public service was with Statistics South Africa where she served as Principal Survey Statistician before venturing into the private sector as a Quantitative Bond Manager with RMB Asset Management. Armed with a wealth of experience from various sectors, she joined the Department of Communications (DOC) and grew within its ranks in its various stages of mutation to the current Department of Communications and Digital Technologies (DCDT). She served as Senior Manager: Financial Analysis and Modelling and later as Chief Director: Telecoms & IT Entities Oversight where she did analysis of business and budget plans of state-owned-entities (SOEs); monitored the performance of SOEs against the set targets and benchmarked best practices; analysed and monitored risks, risk management strategies, investment & borrowing plans of SOEs, among others.

Nosisi matriculated in Mqanduli in the Eastern Cape Province of South Africa. She graduated with a Bachelor of Science degree majoring in Statistics and Applied Mathematics and followed by a B.Sc (Hons) degree in Applied Mathematics before obtaining a Master of Science Degree in Mathematical Statistics. She has completed a variety of short courses and certificates in Telecom Policy, Regulation & Management; Bank Credit and Mathematics of Finance and Financial Engineering. Her leadership style and expertise make her a much sought after professional in the fast-growing and agile ICT sector.